

COLLEGE OF ARTS, HUMANITIES AND SOCIAL SCIENCES

The College of Arts, Humanities, and Social Sciences (CAHSS) is the liberal arts hub of the University of Denver and represents a variety of schools, departments and programs. Our graduate programs range from a PhD in English and Literary Arts to a Master of Arts in Economics to a Master of Arts in Music with a concentration in Musicology - all grounded in academic rigor with an eye to post-graduation careers. With about 300 CAHSS graduate students, our student-centered graduate programs feature small class sizes, with supportive faculty who are nationally and internationally recognized for their research and creative endeavors. In our interdisciplinary, highly collaborative environment, we strive to foster meaningful partnerships amongst students and faculty, support student research opportunities and provide both theoretical and applied learning opportunities for our graduate community.
