

COLLEGE OF ARTS, HUMANITIES AND SOCIAL SCIENCES

The College of Arts, Humanities, and Social Sciences (CAHSS) is the liberal arts hub of the University of Denver and represents a variety of schools, departments and programs ranging from a PhD in English and Literary Arts to a Master of Arts in Economics to a Master of Arts in Music with concentrations in Music Theory and Musicology. All of these graduate programs are well regarded for academic rigor and post-graduation job placement. With about 340 CAHSS graduate students enrolled, our intimate graduate programs feature small class sizes taught by enthusiastic faculty, many of whom are internationally recognized for their research and creative endeavors. In our interdisciplinary, highly collaborative environment, we strive to foster meaningful partnerships amongst students and faculty, support student research opportunities and provide both theoretical and applied learning opportunities for our graduate community.
