

GRADUATE SCHOOL OF PROFESSIONAL PSYCHOLOGY

The Graduate School of Professional Psychology (GSPP) offers five degrees, including the Doctor of Psychology in Clinical Psychology (PsyD), that all aim to prepare graduate students for professional, and especially clinical, practice. Focusing on applied professional work from a practitioner-scholar perspective, the Graduate School of Professional Psychology also offers master's-level programs in Sport and Performance Psychology, International Disaster Psychology: Trauma and Global Mental Health, Forensic Psychology, and Sport Coaching (online), along with certificate programs in Strength and Conditioning and Fitness Coaching (online) and Psychology of Coaching (online). Our goals are to train professionals in understanding human behavior through the integration of theory, research, and practice and to improve the human condition through competent and ethical service.
