

NON-DEGREE STUDENT

Visiting students from another college or university who wish to pursue one to three quarters of study at DU and wish to transfer the credit to their home institution may apply as a non-degree student. This also applies to students seeking limited coursework for personal interest or professional growth. A student seeking a DU degree should not use a non-degree application. Students who have previously earned a bachelor's degree and wish to take classes should contact the Office of Graduate Education (<https://www.du.edu/graduate-education/admission/non-degree-students/>) to complete a Graduate Non-Degree Application.

A non-degree student must submit an application, official transcript from the last institution attended and a nonrefundable $65 application fee. Coursework completed as a non-degree student may be limited and is not automatically accepted toward a degree at the University of Denver. Students wishing to pursue coursework over the summer should register as a visiting summer student (<http://bulletin.du.edu/undergraduate/admission/traditionalbachelorsprogram/summer/>) instead.
